PREFACE

WHEN Sir Alan Gardiner had published the third volume—the Translation—of his edition of the Wilbour Papyrus, there still remained yet one task necessary to complete the work on this unique document, namely the preparation of an Index of personal names, titles, localities, and so forth. Owing to the great length of the original text and the large numbers of names, &c., involved, it was clear that a fourth volume would be required, and since as Sir Alan's assistant I had worked with him on the papyrus over a number of years and was thoroughly familiar with its contents, he very generously asked me if I would myself care to undertake the preparation of this fourth volume, an invitation which I gladly accepted.

In the course of previous work on the papyrus we had prepared a preliminary index on slips, and this index Sir Alan placed at my disposal. The existence of these slips has very materially lightened the task of preparing the present volume, and has provided a firm foundation on which to build; in short, they have been an immense and indispensable help. It is true that the present volume is not a mere mechanical transcript of this preliminary index but has grown out of it, and includes some Sections which were not envisaged in the original plan, but without it not only would the labour of preparing the manuscript have been enormously increased, but I should also have been deprived of the benefit of Sir Alan's notes and comments jotted down on the said slips, a benefit which I hope is reflected in the pages which follow.

In preparing the various articles an attempt has been made to indicate by means of abbreviations the context in which an individual entry occurs; thus in e.g. \square 𓆎 𓆏 Han, slave, A8 52 (h.), the abbreviation (h.) indicates that this man is recorded as a holder of land in an apportioning paragraph of Text A; (ca.) in a like context indicates that the person in question appears as a cultivator-agent in a non-apportioning paragraph in an entry of the type 𓆏 X 'land cultivated by X'. The additional note 'suff.' indicates that in the original MS. a person previously named is referred to here by means of a suffix-pronoun only; similarly 'this h.' and 'this pl.' correspond respectively to pr pn 'this house' and st tn 'this place', referring back to a temple or a locality already named. A list of all abbreviations is given below.

The Sections into which this Index is divided have self-explanatory headings, but it is desirable to say a word regarding the arrangement of the individual articles within each Section. The normal Egyptian alphabetic order has been followed, but in a few cases a word of explanation seems desirable in order to account for apparent inconsistencies. For example, in the geographical Section (V) all names beginning with 𓆏 have been grouped together under s, since it is not always certain whether this sign is the biconsonantal phonogram or whether it is group-writing for simple s; in Section I (Personal Names), however, where it is obviously group-writing, the sign has been regarded as alphabetic s. Initial 𓆏 , except where it appears to mean 'mouth', has been treated as alphabetic r; so too 𓆏 as r, 𓆏 alone as h and so forth, but 𓆏 has been treated as h, 𓆏 as hw. 𓆏 has been transliterated as imy-r in titles (Section II), but in personal names such as 𓆏 𓆏 𓆏 Pmreḥu, where it seems improbable that the initial i of imy has survived, it has been regarded as simple mr and given alphabetic order accordingly. The presence of the articles p, t, n and the allied prefixes pn, tn has also furnished a problem which has had to be dealt with on its merits. Where personal names are concerned these prefixes have been regarded for the purpose of arrangement as an integral part of the name, thus e.g. P₁-nh₁sy, P_n-Sh₁mt will be found under initial p. On the other hand, in temple-names such as t₁ hwt 'the Mansion of . . .' the article is not an essential part of the name and thus has been ignored as regards alphabetic order, though it has been written out in the actual entries. The same holds good of place-names, because of a certain irregularity in the use of the article; e.g. the locality 𓆏 𓆏 𓆏 T-Kaha appears once with the article (A34, 10) and twice without it (A40, 3. 49), and has therefore been classified under initial k. This gives the reason why, throughout the list of geographical and topographical names in Section V of this Index, the articles and allied prefixes have been ignored in the alphabetic arrangement; thus e.g. P₁-W₁dy P-Wadjo appears under w; P_n-R_h Pen-Roḥu under r; T_nt-l₁rw Tent-iōr under t; n₁-rw₁ 'the Houses of . . .' under r.

In the last Section (X) there have been collected the theophorous personal names occurring in the Wilbour

The Wilbour Papyrus.

Papyrus, together with a very general indication of their topographical distribution. Those personal names compounded with the actual names of deities, Amūn, Rē, Seth, &c. (X A), occasioned little difficulty, though such 'deities' as Iuia and Tja'ō owe their inclusion in this group solely to the fact that they occur in the names  , which conform to a very familiar type of theophorous name. On the other hand, those compounded with the epithets of deities (X B) were less easy to select, since some epithets are ambiguous; they might equally well refer to the Pharaoh or on occasion even embody a personal allusion. Here I have erred, if anything, on the side of caution and have endeavoured to exclude such ambiguous names from the list.

A matter which also occasioned some cogitation was the mode of presentation in hieroglyphic of the various names; should they be written from right to left as in the original hieratic, or from left to right as in dictionaries and the like? In the end it was decided to adopt the latter method because not only is it familiar to students in other works of reference, but also because it is easier for the user to find a given name if its initial sign falls on the left at the beginning of the line. To avoid undue repetition of frequently recurring forms, variant writings have normally been collected at the end of each article, and any departure from this practice has been solely on the grounds of convenience. The 'basic' writing given at the head of each entry is usually that which occurs most frequently, and its position does not imply any superiority over the writings quoted as variants. While it is hoped that no variant of importance has been overlooked, it has not seemed necessary to occupy space with minor varieties, such as a 'tick' more or less, or in personal names the occasional omission of the determinative . The vocalized forms of names follow those given in the Translation.

Finally, I have the pleasant task of expressing my heartfelt thanks to those who have made it possible for this volume to appear; namely to Sir Alan Gardiner for inviting me to compile it, for lending me the slips which form the foundation upon which it has been built, and for much valuable advice; to Dr. John D. Cooney and the Trustees of the Brooklyn Museum for including this fourth volume in their monumental publication of the Wilbour Papyrus and for meeting the costs of its production; and to the Oxford University Press for their admirable reproduction of the autographed pages.

II. TITLES AND OCCUPATIONS

The superior capitals after certain personal names indicate that the name in question occurs with the same title also in the corresponding subsections of Section II. Such occurrence, however, does not necessarily imply identity, as in the case of very common titles and names a given combination may belong to more than one individual.
